UTILA, HONDURAS

April 13 - 20, 2019

Starting at $1095

Utila may be the smallest of Honduras' three main Bay Islands, but it's the best place to find the region's whalesharks where they congregate around the banks off the north end. Known as the "Whale Shark Capital of the Caribbean", Utila is one of the few places in the world where Whale Sharks can be seen year-round.

With close to 60 moored dive sites, Utila really does offer something for everyone.

Explore the coral spur and groove formations along the island's southern shoreline, and become intoxicated by the drop-offs found at the northern end's Turtle Harbour. Here, where the continental shelf and the island of Utila meet, the reefs at popular sites like Duppy Waters sprout enormous barrel sponges, and hawksbill turtles, eagle rays, and moray eels dot the vertical landscape of these magnificent drops into the deep. Venture over to south end's Black Hills site, where you can drop down over the edge of an underwater mountain, some 35 feet below the surface, and work your way back along its colourful corals in the company of lionfish and creole wrasses.

Located in a calm residential area of town, the Mango Inn is within walking distance of all amenities and beaches. Nestled in a beautiful tropical garden, all rooms and cabins have the comfort you expect to make your stay as enjoyable and perfect as possible. The new deck and pool are waiting for you to relax and refresh after a day of diving. The resort's restaurant and bar, the Mango Inn Bar & Grill, is situated in the same tropical gardens as the hotel itself, creating the most pleasant and peaceful surroundings to complement the exquisite cuisine.
